2. Historical German People

- Martin Luther – born in 1483 in Eisleben, and having been ordained as a Catholic priest, Luther was a key figure in the Protestant Reformation. According to Luther, the only source of divine authority was in the Bible (the word of God), and not from the Pope (the head of the Catholic Church). His violent views against Jewish people are believed to have planted the seeds of antisemitism in society that would eventually lead to the horrors of the Nazi Holocaust centuries later.
- Ludwig van Beethoven – born in 1770 in Bonn, Beethoven is one of the most famous classical composers in history. What made Beethoven's achievements even more remarkable was that he became increasingly deaf during his career. The anthem of the European Union is Beethoven's Ode to Joy.
- Otto von Bismarck – born in 1815 in Prussia, Bismarck is considered the mastermind of German unification in 1871. Following unification, Bismarck became Germany's first chancellor, using his diplomatic genius and the rapid economic growth under his leadership to position the new state as a European power.
- Karl Marx – born in 1818 Trier in Prussia, Marx is known as the founder of the economic theory of communism, a critique of the capitalism of the Industrial Revolution. According to Marx, the working-class majority were oppressed by the ruling class minority; the only way to fix this injustice would be revolution. Marx's theories inspired countless revolutions across the world, which in turn divided the world between the two dominant powers during the Cold War.
- Carl Benz - born in 1844 in Muhlburg, Benz was an inventor and engineer whose Motorwagen, a three-wheeled bench with an engine, was the first automobile in the world to be put into production, an act that revolutionised the world. His company, Benz & Cie, merged with Daimler Motoren Gesellschaft to form Daimler-Benz, the company that today produces the famous Mercedes-Benz line of cars.
- Albert Einstein – born in 1879 in Ulm, Einstein is the most famous scientist in history. He is most famous for his theory of relativity, which explains the relationship between time and space. As a person of Jewish origin, Einstein objected to the policies of Hitler's rule and settled in the United States in 1933. Einstein, along with other scientists, warned the US that Germany was researching nuclear weapons, although Einstein himself was opposed to using this kind of science for weapons.
